STRIKE OVER. CLAIMS ON

HE news that the El Al main tenance workers had ended their strike was received with an almost audible sigh of relief. Planes are our only means of contact with the outside world now that sea travel has ceased to be operated on a regular hasis. In times of emergency, if there is a war threat, or in the major air security threats of two years ago, it is only El Al that can guarantee travel geared to Israel's special needs

The 400 El Al maintenance technicians are key workers in the full sense of the word. They not only can halt operations at will by refusing to service the planes, but it is on the quality of their work that the airlines safety record depends almost as much as on the skill of the pilots.

This fact is reflected in their This fact is reflected in their maintenance men's pay, which now ranges from about II.1.100 for the lowest grade of mechanic to II.2.420 for the inspector in charge of a maintenance crew, with the assurance of an administrative job for menover the age limit or disqualified for health reasons. These are good conditions for salaried are good conditions for salaried, permanent jobs with other bene-fits, including occasional free trips, though obviously under-present conditions on the labour market some of the men could

It is of interest to note that the striking men seemed almost to welcome the back-to-work orders, as providing an opportun-ity to fulfil this condition for renewed talks on their claims without returning voluntarily and losing face. In this sense, the orders are effective, for they both ended the immediate crisis and help promote a settlement On the other hand there have already been demands that the fines imposed by the Labour Court for the wild-cat strike be "cancelled" prior to any settle-ment. This would once more make a strike a contest in which the striker may not win, but cannot lose, and undermine the force of the new law intended to give some meaning to labour agreements.

In any case the strike has only been postponed for the duration of the work orders. The basic issues at stake in this case are far too serious. to be papered over with a fat increase for the 400 men, disguised as allowances for new work clothes or tea money.

By DAVID LANDAU

MSGR. J. Ola Adeyemo, Senior Prophet/Apostle of the Cherubim and Scraphim Movement, was on the third day of his fast-forpeace when I talked to him yesterday at the Scottish Hospice opposite Mt. Zion. He looked fit and well and said he felt fine. "When I was young I did two 21-day fasts," he said smiling, "With God's help, everything is possible." The aims of his present fast are threefold: "to pray for peace in Israel and the Middle East as a whole: to pray for world peace; and to pray for the progress of the Movement."

The Cherubim and Seraphim Movement was launched in 1925 in Western Nigeria, The Founder, St. Moses Orimolade Tunolse, was born a pagan and was converted to Christianity 'by the spirit of God,' according to Msgr. Adeyemo. He received no formal Christian training from the missionaries, but "preached the Gospel from his child-hood," as something which come to him quite naturally.

told me, including several cases of reviving the dead and making the By the time of his death in 1933, the Movement had spread through-out Nigeria. Today it counts some four million faithful and over 400 churches, the large majority in Nigeria itself, but with branches in other parts of Africa and in Britain. The Founder was succeeded by Spiritual Father N. Ekoka, and when he died in 1970 the present Spiritual Father, His Grace Samuel Oguleke Kalejaiye, took over His headquarters are at Kaduna, in northern Ni-

The faithful had from all the tribes of Nigeria, and the Movement maintains cordial ecumenical relations with other Christian denominations, often holding joint meetings and prayer sessions. There are prophetesses as well as prophets, and they too can be endowed with the power to perform miracles.

Msgr. Adeyemo himself is one of 200-odd senior apostle/prophets, who are the equivalent of hishops. His diocese, at Kontagora, comprises 14

He was born an Anglican and was converted to the Movement as a high school pupil. His first contact with the Movement was when he went to pray with the Spiritual Father for success in his school entry examinations. He passed the exams, but was a failure at the school because he kept seeing visions in the night and writing prophecies and revelations instead of answering the questions in end-of-term tests. Matters came to a head when an angel appeared to him one night and informed him that he was a "vineyard of God" and was destined to preach the Gospel. From that night, he found he simply could not read or write anything other than revelations. Within months the school expelled him, and he went to the Spiritual Father to take up his calking.

I pressed the apostle on his own miracle-making propensities, and he admitted modestly that, "if it is the will of God." he does perform them In 1954, while still a juntor priest, - by fasting and prayer whom the doctors had tried and failed to cure for five years. He said he could not explain why the bi shops in other Christian denominations do not perform miracles. Heating the sick is carried on by means of a consecrated metal staff which the apostle/prophet carries with him. He lays it upon the head of the patient and prays for him. He also uses the "staff of the prophet" to consecrate water which the sick person then drinks.

Msgr. Adeyemo told me that he had sought — and obtained — the approval of Spiritual Father Kaleaiye before embarking on his fast-for-peace in Jerusalem. He came to the holy city as an Easter pligrim. fasting during the 40 days of the Lent period which precedes the holi-day. (His current fast is an 168-

Because Israel is the spiritual cradle of Christianity, the apostle answered, and therefore of deep concern to the Movement. Why was he fasting in the relative seclusion of his room in the Hospice rather than in some public place? I asked. "It doesn't matter where you pray to God from," was the plainly spoken reply. "Even the most secret prayers are answered. And finally: was Msgr. Adeyemo expecting any miraculous effects from his fast? "Let's leave that to God!" he replied modestly.

SOLUTIONS TO TODAY'S PUZZLES ON FRIDAY

What, no 'pop'?

AN American visitor to Israel, touring an Arab village, was curious about the strange music blaring from the radio. He asked his host if this was religious music. "No," replied the Arab in some surprise, "it's like your Frank Si-natra or Bing Crosby." eurprise,

Why is it that, to the Western ear, Arab music often sounds "unmusical"? I put this question to Professor Amnon Shilosh, chairman of the Hebrew University's Musico-logy Department, who holds doctoral degrees in both musicology and Middle East studies.

He explained that, unlike Western music, which is based on half and whole tones, Arab music is based on quarter tones, to which the Western ear is not attuned. This greatly increases the number of tonal possibilities, and also explains why certain Western instruments, such as the plane, which have the built-in limitation of whole and half tones, can not be used for Arab music. Other Western instruments, saxophone, have been adopted quite happily to it. Scales in Arab music are based on intervals of fourths or fifths rather than on the octave. Written musical scores are almost unknown in the Arab world, though some written music has been pu-blished for teaching. This is partially due to general cultural conditions. But another important rea-is primary vocal, not instrumental. The classical musical ensemble or takht of the Arab world never exce-(from which the English word lute came), the halil (flute), the violin (originally a Near Eastern type supported on the player's knee, and later a variation of the European violin) and two percussion instruments. It was the singer who was the "star" and the focus; the instrumental accompaniment was secondary, played in unison with no radio, Prof. Shilosh said, is modern music sometimes very close in form, style and content to classical works. Though Western popular music is heard on Arab radio stations no Arab equivalent of "pop" has appeared. "I don't think it will. Though many Western influences are obvious in Arab music, there always seem to be people who make sure the pendulum doesn't swing too far."

Arab music from classical to modern is all about love, Lea Levavi learned when she interviewed Professor Amnon Shiloah, chairman of the Hebrew University's Musicology Department — but so far there is no Arab equivalent of "pop" music.

One of the most interesting of these influences is the introduction. of Western instruments and larger son is that Arab classical music ensembles, at the expense of the smaller instrumental groups and traditional instruments. It is now not unusual for 20 violins to play a long introduction before the sing-er begins, as well as extended interludes between verses. "There are interesting anachronisms. The instrumental passages remind you of all kinds of Western musical themes, but when the singer begins you know you're in the Middle East."

Yet, though Western instruments and musical themes have been bor-rowed, our concepts of orchestration have not. In the new large ensembles, the music is still uniphonic perience requiring interaction bet- all the instruments playing exactly ween performers and audience in the same melody. the romantic texts in literary Arabic and short passages in spo-ken Arabic. Some of the texts are long with much improvisation; others are short, rhythmic and to the point.

Iran though part of the Middle East, has a slightly different musical tradition from the Arab world. Instrumental music is prevalent there and the writing of scores is much more developed than in the Arab states. Even in the Arab countries, there are wide differences. Western influences are more prominent in Egyptian and Leb-anese music, for example, them in that of Iraq or Syris. Arab folk music (not usually heard on the radio) shows a far wider variety of styles than the art music. One of the most interesting is a com-position between two poets, in which they entertain the audience by singing verses on every possible subject. Though seemingly spootaneous, the verses are often patterned on forms handed down from father to son. In verses praising a breds and groom or village notables, verses may be rather standardized, the poet filling in the names and other details to suit the occasion. In folk music, of course, texts are simpler than in art music, "but not that simple." Dialects are used more liberally and folk music is often very local, tled to the traditions of a particular village or town.

What about the influence of Arab religious music on the religious music of Jews from Arab countries?

"It is hard whom," says Prof. Shiloah. "Maybe the Arabs were influenced by an-cient Jewish music which had survived in the Jewish community. Or perhaps Jews from Bastern backgrounds took their music from what they heard around them."
He believes, indeed, that the influence is two-way. In some Jewish religious music, there are faint hints of Arab songs which were popular 50 years ago but are now forgoitten in the Arab world.

"And," he concluded, "while list-ming to the caremonial music of Rose (Michal Bat-Adam) is left a childless widow at the age of 21. According to Jewish law her hus-band's brother is obliged to marry her or give her a bill of divorce-ment (halitza). There are three brothers, two married, and the third, Nissim (Gabi Uterman), is 11 years old and Rose must wait seven years before knowing whether or not she has to marry him. Nissim runs away from home and Rose gives him shelter, causing malicious comment among the neighbours. Nis-sim turns 13 and tries to prove his manhood by going to a house of prostitution, which scares him. He attempts to make love to Rose. She Mizrachi, a name new to me, the film is said to be based on a true story which has become a legend in Jerusalem. Rose is supposed to have lived with Nissim for 45 years and to have borne him 10 children. The story certainly put a great strain on my credibility, especially since it is acted without passion. Michal Bat-Adam gives a sensitive performance, but it is without fer-vour, as is that of Gabi Uterman, although he makes the impression of being a nice lad. Moshe Tal makes but a brief appearance es

'Revolutionary' Arab girl finds village life hard to take

By Lea Levavi

WHEN Ismahan Dacca entered high school in her native Baka al-Garbia (a Moslem village in the Triangle) she caused a scandal by asking one of the boys in the class for a pen. The village elders have gossiped about her ever since, she claims, but she continues to be a "revolutionary." She is now in her first year of nursing school at Hillel Yafe Hospital in Hadera, where she is the first and only Moslem female student. (There are two Christian Arab girls in her class and several Arab men, both Christian and Mos-

"Conservative" is too mild a word for her village, Ismahan told me when I visited her home in Baka. At the time of the interview, she was home for the Passover vacation and was finding village life so un-bearable that she was looking for a job outside the village for the few days left before school reopened. Her parents-particularly her father —are perfectly happy with her 'rev-olutionary ideas"; ("Maybe because my father has many Jewish friends.") Her five brothers, all of whom work in Jewish communities, also understand. But very few others in the village are as open-

Israel remembers its six million

Israel yesterday marked Heroes and Martyrs Memorial Day with commemorative meetings and services all over the country. In the three major assemblies. Premier Golda Meir spoke at Kibbutz Lo-hamei Hagetaot in Western Galilee, Deputy Premier Yigal Allon spoke at the central ceremony in Jerusalem, and Defence Minister Moshe Dayan spoke at Kibbutz Yad Mordechai, opposite the Gaza

Flags flew at half-mast, from sundown on Monday to dusk yesterday. Cafes, cinemas and theatres were closed on Monday night. Israel Broadcasting adapted the mood of its programmes to the Holocaust

Special prayers were recited in memory of the six million Jews of Europe, who perished at the hands of the Nazis in World War Two.

'At Kibbutz Lohamei Hagetaot, Premier Golda Meir asked: "Are we learning the lesson of what happened? Before the eyes of the whole world it was possible to mur-der and burn six million people... from bitter unprecedented experience we know: we cannot rely on anyone. It is no accident that we are here for this occasion, a short time before we remember those who fell in the wars of Israel. When we tried to save the Jews of one of the Nazi occupied countries, we were told: "There is a war on, and there are no ships."

WAR CRIMINAL CHARGE

Turning to the recent approval, by the U.N. Commission of Human Rights, of a resolution charging Israel with war crimes, Mrs. Meir, on a note of scorn and indignation. pointed out that the resolution had been passed on the initiative of the Arab and Communist states. 'There is great significance in the fact that the Movie Academy prize was awarded to this movie on Heroes' and Martyrs' Memorial Day," Mr. Arthur Co-hen, producer of the "Garden of Finzi Continis," which was se-lected as the best foreign lanrael Radio yesterday by phone from Switzerland The film is about a Jewish family in war-time Italy.

Mr. Cohen, who was interviewed for the "Hayom Hazeh" programme, said this was pro-bably the only movie on the subject of the Holocaust which merited international success. Everyone — not only Jews could identify with its heroes, he said.

The film, directed by Vittorio de Sica, made no compromises with the facts, he said. It was filmed on location in Ferrera, the actors spoke Italian, and it can be viewed as an historic docurrent, although these things might have hurt it in the U.S., from a commercial viewpoint.

Dayan links Holocaust to Gaza issue

Jerusalem Post Reporter YAD MORDECHAI. - Defence Minister Moshe Dayan yesterday pointed up the lessons of the Holocaust in facing up to the challenges of security and settlement in the Gaza Strip today. He was addressing a 10,000-strong Holocaust Memorial Assembly at this Mapam kibbutz facing the Strip, named after Warsaw Ghetto fighter chief, Mordechai Anilewitz.

"Holocaust concepts must be translated into everyday terms here at Yad Mordechai. This was not only a buffer protecting Tel Aviv in 1948, but a neighbour of the Gaza Strip ever since," he said.

"We must never again let the Strip serve as a base for Egyptian tanks or for hostile operations against Israel. We must not permit a young generation to grow up in the Strip, as in a hothouse on dreams of destroying Israel," he said. "In our own generation of revival, we cannot ignore the problem presented by the 250,000 Arabs of the Strip-100,000 of them refugees. We must strive for the best possible human relations and neighbourly

Mr. Dayan said that the purpose of remembering on Holocaust Day was not merely to en-sure that what happened to the gotten, but also to ensure that a Holocaust and a Hitler could not emerge in the future.

Mapam M.K. and ghetto fighter Chaika Grossman also spoke.
